This Plow was Used Before
1780 at Colebrook, Conn.
The metal part is of Salisbury iron—the best in the world.
This kind of metal was smelted in North Colebrook and forged into gun barrels for the Revolutionary Army by Mr. Emerson's ancestors at Colebrook. The family has been largely engaged in the manufacture of metal goods and other articles for over 250 years. Mr. Emerson began in 1852.
Mr. Emerson's ancestors on both sides were officers in the Revolutionary Army, and before that in the French and Indian Wars.
677

An old plow used over a 100 year ago. Now in the lobby of the Rockford, Ill. Works of the
J. I. Case Co. Racine, Wisconsin.